BAD BREAK COSTS GAME

Alexander, Held at Third by Coach, Could Have Made Second Tally

BRAY'S FIELD, Boston, Oct. 11.—As the shades of a brilliant afternoon began to settle over Bray's Field, Duffy Lewis stepped to the bat and cracked out a single which sent Harry Hooper over the plate with the winning run in the third game of the world's series.

Realizing that Alexander the Great had been beaten, the few thousand Philly fans sat silent and dejected while the roar of 5,000 crazed rooters rang in their ears. No sooner had Hooper scored than the spectators jumped over the wall on to the playing surface and carried away their heroes while the band marched around the enclosure, followed by the Royal Rooters. For many minutes after the game the green field was alive with humanity. These cheering thousands were waving their red and white banners and sending forth cheer after cheer in honor of Bill Carrigan and his triumphant hosts.

PATIAL BREAK IN THE THIRD.

The break in the game to which Alexander may attribute his defeat came in the third round of play, the inning in which the Phillies scored their only run. Burns was on third and Alex on second with one down, when Bancroft hit a hot single to centre field. Burns scored, but Alex himself, who had rounded third and was sprinting for the park, was stopped by Ducey, who was coaching at third.

Alexander would have had a good chance to score the second run, even if Alex himself, who had rounded third and was sprinting for the park, was stopped by Ducey, who was coaching at third.

ABOLITION OF 8-CENT FARE IS CAMPAIGN CRY

Franklin Party's Platform Puts Real Rapid Transit at Top of Program

ISSUE UNITES CITIZENS

"Real rapid transit, the big issue in the Franklin party's campaign."

For the first time since the happy choice of "Franklin" was announced as the name of the new party which will fight for the rank and file of Philadelphia's citizenry, definite and compact integration of independent sentiment was felt today as a strong, running tide that swept to one centre of determined opinion from all sections of the city, uniting them in one great common interest.

The response to the platform of the Franklin party, announced today, was immediate and impressive. The appeal to the people to down force the principle of contractor reform, as old as the history of Philadelphia reform movements, no longer, as in former years, rested on a vague denunciation of the general dishonesty of Organization officials.

This campaign had been brought to a crisp, tangible issue, men of all walks of life, in central Philadelphia, in Germantown, in Kensington, in southeast and southwest, declared. This issue was real rapid transit.

And it was no longer, as of old, they said, hard to find the half-hidden foe. The leaders in the plot to betray the city had shown their heads above the trench; it was their callous indifference to public opinion and to personal animus that had exposed them to the direct naming of their names in the Franklin party platform. Lane, openly opposed to the Taylor plan, and certain to permit only anti-tram candidates to emerge from his harmony conferences; Connelly, secretly and covertly fighting it; McNeel, interested only in what he could make out of it.

The issue was strong and clean now.

FEDS AND O. B. CHIEFS AGAIN CONFER; PEACE PLANS ARE DISCUSSED

Obstinacy of Ban Johnson Said to Be Only Bar in Way of the Negotiations

DISLIKE FOR GILMORE

By a Staff Correspondent

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 11.—Another meeting was held this morning between the National Commission and the Federal League representatives. The delegates who were present insist that the subject of the meeting was not to perfect peace of mind in general and eradicate some of the evils which have developed since the fight between the two factions. It is only natural that such an announcement should be made, but it is said on good authority that the plans for negotiations, it is said, Johnson refuses to sit at a meeting with Gilmore, and it is necessary to carry on his end of the negotiations through Secretary McRoy.

According to information given out by Chairman Herrmann, of the National Commission, and President Tener, of the National League, there is no chance for peace, as Organized Ball is working for its conditions and will refuse to recognize or deal with the Federal League. This statement seems absurd in view of the fact that several meetings have been held recently.

TEUTONS HURL SLAVS BACK ON THREE FRONTS

Muscovites Repulsed at Dvinsk, Boranovitch Bridgehead and Pladki

ENEMY LOSES FIVE MILES

At each of the three points on the huge eastern battle line, where it is essential for the invaders to capture important transportation centres to put them in complete possession of the railroad net of western Russian and enable them to "dig in" for the winter, progress has seemingly been made by the Germans.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg's extreme left, with Dvinsk as its goal, has tightened its iron ring about the city, coveted for the Teutons winter quarters in the Baltic provinces.

The German right wing, under General von Linsingen, aiming at the Lunjeta-Sarny sector of the Wilna-Rovno Railroad, has repulsed a number of Russian attacks. Of this army the German official statements have had "nothing important to report" for nearly two weeks. Last night's bulletin shows it has made important headway during that period. The fighting referred to in the official report occurred between Rafalovski and Kovel.

Rafalovski is only a short distance from Sarny, the railroad intersection which has been for many weeks this army's objective. Once Sarny is in German hands, Rovno would soon become untenable for the Russians, and the still vigorous and partly successful Russian offensive in Volhynia and Galicia would be transformed necessarily into a defensive.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.

In the eastern theatre the Germans repulsed Russian attacks by the sectors of Dvinsk, at Baranovitch, and also at Pladki on the Sereth River, the War Office reported this afternoon.

The German plan to capture Dvinsk, on which Field Marshal von Hindenburg is now concentrating his efforts, has made further important progress.

Germans under von Hindenburg continued today to wrest scattering positions from the Russians in the Dvinsk region. Petrograd advices admitted.

The War Office announced last night the capture of Russian positions over a front of nearly five miles north of the railroad running west from Dvinsk. A violent Russian attack west of the city in an endeavor to regain the positions lost when the Germans last week made

SIR WILFRED POWELL'S SON REPORTED KILLED IN FRANCE

Said to Have Succumbed to Asphyxiating Gas

News of the death of Gareth Henry Mansell Powell in the battle of Ypres on April 21 has been received in this city. Powell, who is the youngest son of Sir Wilfred Powell, British Consul General in Philadelphia, was reported missing during the early part of August, but the news received today was the first intimation that the young man had lost his life.

The source of the information is a young Canadian officer, who says he was nearby when young Powell was killed. According to him, Mr. Powell was one of a party of 15 who defended a farmhouse at a crucial point in order to cover a retreat of the British forces brought about by the use of asphyxiating gas for the first time. When the gas reached the little band after they had stood the brunt of a vicious attack of the 15 were dead. Mr. Powell was one of these.

Fourth Game of World's Series, Braves' Field, Boston, Tomorrow, 2 p. m.

By CHANDLER D. RICHTER

Philadelphia Official Scorer for World's Series Games Between Phillies and Red Sox.

BRAY'S FIELD, BOSTON, Oct. 11.—Alexander the Great was beaten by the Red Sox this afternoon before the largest crowd that ever attended a baseball game—42,300 persons. The Red Sox captured a brilliant pitchers' battle by the score of 2 to 1.

The defeat gives Boston the lead in the series and with the downfall of the wonderful Alexander the Red Sox are heavy favorites to win the world's title. It was a thrilling game from start to finish, with the pitchers playing the leading role. Dutch Leonard, Carrigan's star southpaw; Duffy Lewis and Tris Speaker were responsible for the victory. Leonard got off to a bad start, and the Phillies should have won the game easily in the first three innings, but the poor hitting of Paskert and Cravath, who were swinging at bad balls all afternoon, enabled Leonard to get out of his hole with but one run scored against him.

After the third inning Leonard was invincible and gave one of the most remarkable exhibitions of pitching ever seen on any field. In the last six innings not a single Philly player reached first base and but one ball was met fairly by a Philly batter. Leonard deserved his victory as he outpitched Alexander in the closing innings of the game, but his victory was due more to the failures of the Phillies to take advantage of their chances early in the game than to Leonard's superiority over Alexander. Leonard had a fast ball with a big jump on it and a drop ball very much like the one Babe Ruth used when in his prime.

Leonard's control was remarkable for a left-hander. He did not issue a base on balls in the entire game and there were a few occasions where three balls were called against him.

Throughout the game the Phillies swung at bad balls, and the men did not seem to have the confidence that was so noticeable in the first two games in Philadelphia.

No doubt the failure to secure runs and take advantage of breaks early in the game had much to do with the falling off of the enthusiasm and spirit of Moran's men.

In the first inning Speaker lost Stock's easy fly in the sun and the ball fell safe for a double. Bancroft made a pretty bunt to Gardner, which sent Stock to third. This was a wonderful opportunity for the Phillies, but with the Red Sox infield playing in on the grass and Leonard plainly nervous, Paskert was too anxious and popped up a foul to Gardner.

Leonard's confidence returned at this break in his favor and he fanned Cravath, leaving Stock stranded on third. The last ball Cravath struck at was above his eyes, while the first one was a curved ball in the dirt.

Last Philly Chance in Third

In the third inning another glorious opportunity presented itself. Burns opened the inning with a slashing single over Barry's head, and Alexander was given a life on Hobitzell's muff of Gardner's throw. Stock moved both men along on a sacrifice, and Bancroft followed with a single to centre. Burns scored on this hit but Alexander was held at third.

No one in the Red Sox thought to intercept Speaker's throw and Bancroft went to second on the throw. This presented another chance for Paskert and Cravath to enter the world's series' hall of fame, but they failed again to deliver. Paskert hit a ball far on the outside of the plate and popped a little fly to second. With the Boston infield playing in, this hit almost fell safe. Barry made a remarkable catch of the hit, taking the ball over his shoulder while running at full speed with his back toward the plate.

Cravath then went out on a long fly to Lewis. In the small Phillies' Park the ball would have traveled far into the bleachers, but on this immense field it was an easy out, as Lewis was playing deep. The Boston fans went wild at this sudden turn of affairs. Leonard regained his confidence.

It became merely a question of whether Alexander could hold the Red Sox scoreless.

With one out in the fourth inning Speaker tore a triple down the right-field line, and scored on Hobitzell's long sacrifice fly to Paskert. There was no more scoring until the Red Sox pushed across the winning run in the ninth.

Hooper opened this inning with a single to right, and was sacrificed to second by Scott, who took a daring chance and bunted after two strikes had been called. Speaker was passed purposely and Niehoff threw out Hobitzell, both runners moving up.

With two men out and a hit needed, Duffy Lewis made his third safety of the game, a clean single over second, which scored Hooper, and gave Alexander the Great his first World's Series defeat.

FIRST INNING

Leonard's first pitch was a ball, and Stock fouled the next two up to the roof of the high grandstand. The fourth was over Stock's head. He knocked the fifth pitch straight at Speaker on the fly, but the crowd was shocked breathless as the ball dropped at Tris' feet, he having lost it in the sun. Bancroft sacrificed perfectly after one strike had been called. Carrigan to Hobitzell. Stock taking third. Leonard's first two to Paskert were wide, but he swung at the next one for a strike.

Leonard's famous bean ball made the count three and one. Then Paskert lifted a high foul to Gardner. Leonard pitched one across the plate on a level with Cravath's eyes. Then Gavy fouled off two and was in a hole. The fourth pitch was close and it was 2 and 2. Gavy took his big swing, but missed the fifth pitch entirely and the Phillies walked slowly out to their positions, just a little chagrined. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Alexander pitched two low fast balls, but Hooper did not bite. The third cut the heart of the plate and Hooper hit the fourth for a long fly to Cravath. Alexander also got into a hole by pitching two balls to Scott, but the latter put things right by fouling off the next two, which also were bad. Scott struck out on the fifth pitch, throwing away his bat. Speaker swung at the first ball, but barely fouled it off. The next two were too close, but Speaker hit the fourth ball for an easy fly to Paskert. No runs, no hits, no errors.

SECOND INNING

Leonard tried to break a curve over, but it was too low. He tried again with the same result. The third was across the outside corner for a strike, and the next one Rudy fouled off. Another foul made it two strikes, and the next pitch was the third strike, Rudy making a terrific swing.

Leonard slipped a strike over on Whitted, but failed to make George bite at the next two which were bad. George fouled off the fourth and the fifth. Whitted raised a high fly backed of first which Hobitzell caught after circling around under it. The first pitch to Niehoff was bad. The next one he heaved into the air for an easy fly to Scott. No runs, no hits, no errors.
